THE ORIGIN, NATURE, IMPORTANCE AND IMPROVEMENT OF BUSINESS AND OTHER ETHICS

15. ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book would not have been written if Mary Louise Kearny had not asked me to preside at her work shop at UNESCO in 1998, when I became very interested in the important subject of business ethics which played a significant role in our recent financial crisis.

An important expansion in my education occurred in 1990 when David Pines, a physicist, invited me to a work shop at the Santa Fe Institute (SFI) in Santa Fe, New Mexico of which he was one of the founders, just across the Sangre de Christo Mountains where my father as a young man and his family lived a hard life on a ranch. David was in the Physics Department of the University of Illinois of which my father-in-law was the head.

At the SFI, I met George Cowan, one of its founders and generous funders. He was distinguished physical chemist formerly at Los Alamos National Laboratory and a very wise and impressive man with whom I discussed business ethics on a number of occasions. He was also a successful banker and talented business man.

At this work shop I also met MIT Professor of Political Science Nazli Choucri, who after the work shop supplied me with good books on sustainable development and related subjects, encouraged me and kindly participated in the drafting of the part of this book on "Environmental Ethics – A new Challenge" on which subject I have tried to provide ideas and have been privileged to discuss with her over twenty years.

Some other friends who have been most helpful to me are:

Patrick de Fontbresson, who studied philosophy, teaches and practices law in Paris and is an expert in human rights. He supplied me with writings of leading philosophers and scholars I have cited.

Claude Mosseri Marlio, who teaches E.U. law in business schools and has had a rich career in important U.S. and French pharmaceutical companies.

Sophie Cauvin Lucchini, my wonderful research assistant and perfectly bilingual secretary who typed and retyped earlier versions of this book when it was an expanding article.

Odile Lemonnier provided valuable organizing and secretarial help.

Antoinette Pas' Phd thesis provided Bakhtins ideas on the role of language.

There are many others who have sent me useful articles and provided good ideas over the many years it has taken for me to write this book to whom I give grateful thanks.

I also owe a debt of gratitude to the persons in the great libraries at Harvard and the University of Chicago and the journalists at the Financial Times, New York Times and Le Monde who reported news and helped me to find many of the books and articles cited in this book.

Special thanks should also go to my wife, who studied and taught physics and became a splendid artist (painter), her exceptional parents, and my wonderful children for their input, discussion, help and support and to my parents who were exemplary ethical human beings.
